Forested Watershed Management: Threats and Conservation

Aim & Scope

This edited book aims to bring together all the recent and available information on the multifaceted research that unravels the scientific study of Forested Watershed and their Management. It will be of colossal use to all the researchers and passionate teachers who are currently working on the field of Forestry and watershed management. The relationship among watersheds, forest hydrology, forest management, biogeochemical cycle, mitigation of climate change and many more will be discoursed in detail either through methodical reviews or by original research articles. Since many researchers are working in watersheds, this edited book will be looked for and commendable.

The below-mentioned chapters are anticipated in the edited book. The title is not final; authors can change the title as per the contents of their chapters. However, the major content of the chapters in the book will be fixed. New chapter titles that include any recent report on groundwater, wildlife dependency on the water, Urban watersheds management are also welcome. Book chapters can be either reviews or unpublished original research articles. Contributors are requested to submit an abstract of one full page with title and tentative subtitles, 4-5 key words and details of all authors including email address of the corresponding author.

Contents

1. Hydrological principles for sustainable management of forest ecosystems
2. Watering the forest for the trees: an emerging priority for managing water in forest landscapes
3. Silvicultural approaches to maintain forest health and productivity under current and future climates
4. Linkages between forest soils and water quality and quantity
5. Potential impacts of global climate change on the hydrology and ecology of freshwater systems of the forests
6. Maintain or restore forest and vegetative cover in riparian areas
7. Forest Ecosystem Services Under Climate Change, Air and Water Pollution
8. Climatic vulnerability of the world's freshwater and marine forests
9. Identify, maintain, and enhance important habitats diversity for flora and fauna in forested watersheds
10. Responses of insect pests, pathogens, and invasive plant species to the forested watersheds health
11. Role of trees in water conservation- natural terracing- species suitability. Recharging of water springs
12. Environmental legislation and forested watershed management
13. Adaptation strategies and approaches for forested watersheds
14. Geospatial technology used in watershed Management
15. Restoration of forested wetlands, stream channels and hydrologic connectivity

Author Benefits

1. Selected chapters (not all) will be indexed in R Square L and other indexing platforms including Amazon, Google Books etc.
